PATHWAYS SUPPORTS AND SERVICES

Achieving the Dream (ATD) is a national network of higher education institutions, coaches, advisors, investors and partners that supports all students, particularly the most underserved, to realize substantial value from their post-secondary experience and earned credentials, thereby strengthening their communities.

ATD contributes to innovation in higher education in areas such as open educational resources, adjunct faculty development, holistic student supports redesign, and tribal college network engagement. It provides a framework for supporting, accelerating and sustaining systemic change to close equity gaps among students in community colleges that is rooted in fifteen years of learning and experience. Leveraging this framework, ATD coaches colleges to identify academic and non-academic barriers, determine capacity for whole-college change, and implement cutting edge reforms like Pathways, at large scale to improve student and institutional outcomes.

Building on the Pathways model, ATD offers colleges a range of service options to meet their needs and advance their student success work, including

- Initial Three-Year Network Experience that helps colleges undertake student-focused institutional change using data to identify equity gaps, build capacity and create conditions for sustainable transformation of the student experience, develop curricular pathways that lead to skill mastery and talent development aligned with local and regional labor market needs, and provide the support students need to get and stay on their pathways ($78,000 per year)
- Holistic Student Supports Implementation for more intensive guidance in the planning, design and implementation of academic and student supports for students across their pathways ($52,000 per year)
- Custom coaching including on-going leadership and data coaching targeted to meet the needs of the colleges as they move through their student success journey after the initial three-year experience, and targeted coaching in areas such as data and technology, teaching and learning, equity, and communications and engagement (prices range from $12,500 to $28,000 per year)
- Supplemental Services and Programs including Open Educational Resources Planning and Implementation, Adjunct Faculty Development and Data and Technology Assessments (prices range from $10,000 to $28,000 per year)

ATD annually hosts DREAM, a conference that joins experts, policy makers, investors, thought leaders, and practitioners to examine emerging strategies for critical success issues; a data and analytics summit; a Holistic Student Supports Institute; and a Teaching and Learning Institute, all of which are open to network and non-network colleges.

For more information, please go to www.achievingthedream.org or reach out to Bonita Brown, VP for Network Engagement, at bbrown@achievingthedream.org.